BUILDING PARTNERSHIPS

The US Air Force builds and strengthens international relationships with more than 100 allies and partners through a variety of security cooperation activities.

We cooperate with partners through hundreds of international agreements to share information and resources.

We participate in personnel exchanges with international partners to enhance understanding and build enduring mil-to-mil relationships.

STRENGTHENING CAPABILITIES & CAPACITY

The US Air Force plays a key role in helping partner nations build and strengthen airpower capabilities and capacity.

We help partners and allies build air, space and cyberspace capabilities through a Total Package Approach that addresses acquisitions, training and other associated needs.

We strengthen interoperability and enhance skills with international partners in approximately 80 exercises each year.

DEVELOPING INTERNATIONAL AIRMEN

Properly organized, trained and equipped International Airmen are the lifeblood of security cooperation.

Thousands of Airmen possessing language skills, cultural awareness, and regional expertise serve as air advisors, security cooperation officers, air attachés, instructors and in other roles across the USAF. They work side-by-side with international partners to confront shared security challenges.
